

The superb performance of HENRY B. WILSON during the 1969-1970 WestPac cruise was the direct product of the consummate professional skill and dedication of her captain, Commander Henry C. MUSTIN, and the high level of achievement to which he inspired his officers and men. His unwillingness to settle for anything less than perfection has made blue water professionals of us all, and earned for HENRY B. WILSON a reputation for excellence to which we can point with pride.
